Pompallier MISSION

Pioneer Printery / Colonial Gardens

The French Place in the Bay of Islands

A unique slice of New Zealand's founding heritage. From the French Provincial printery & tannery to the fragrant New Zealand gardens, Pompallier Mission is a rare mix of not-to-be-missed experiences.

Once the 1840s South Seas headquarters of pioneering French missionaries, today only their printery and tannery survive, working again as they did during the turbulent times of British-Māori Treaty-making and war. The later colonial gardens and heritage landscape provide equally intriguing stories – as well as a beautiful setting in which to explore or simply relax.
